

What to Expect Along the Final Phase of King Albert Avenue

The final phase of improvements along the corridor will introduce new signage and pavement markings to support people using micromobility on-street. These features will help all users navigate the street safely and provide clear guidance to people driving, cycling, rolling or using other micromobility devices to share the road responsibly. For more tips about sharing our streets please visit coquitlam.ca/SharedStreets.

30 km/h Speed Limit Signage

These signs will be installed to indicate the new posted speed limit to comply with industry standards for Local Street Shared Roadways.

Bicycle Route Signage

These signs provide wayfinding and route guidance for people cycling, rolling or using other micromobility devices.

Share the Road Signage

These signs indicate that the street is shared between people driving, cycling, rolling or using other micromobility devices.

Shared Roadway Pavement Marking (Sharrows)

These pavement markings will be painted at set intervals along the street (per industry standards) to indicate that travel lanes are shared by people driving, cycling, rolling or using other micromobility devices.
